ENGL 3190, Language Analysis for Teachers of English

This course, Engl 3190, Language Analysis for Teachers of English (LATÉ), is a comparative study of the structures and discourse features of Standard American English as expected in school and of other American English varieties as used in the home-community. Utilizing a team-work approach and a language awareness project as the focus of activities, the course examines pronunciation, grammar and meaning for the purpose of promoting a better analytical understanding and an informed usage of the English language in oral and written communication.

Objectives
1. Recognize structural and discourse differences between the languages of the community and the language of the academy.
2. Analyze the structural and discourse differences between school and community languages
3. Know how to apply language principles for pronunciation, grammar, and meaning to oral and written discourse.